Christmas Poems

Mark Greene

MuddyPearl

A beautiful collection of poems for the season of Advent. Punctuated with snippets of historical background and contemporary context, each piece has been individually interpreted by insightful designs and gorgeous illustrations. The juxtaposition of the ancient Christmas story against the contemporary comment uncovers a stark reality, leading to surprise, sometimes shock and then inevitably on to perplexed wonder and worship. Perfect as an Advent devotional or spiritual reflections to prepare for Christmas.

Author

Mark Greene is a greatly loved speaker, teacher and writer, mainly on the joys, trials and reality of living life as a Christian in a contemporary context, whether that be in your workplace, watching a film, or out shopping. He is Executive Director of The London Institute of Contemporary Christianity. Before that he lectured in Communications and in Contemporary Culture at the London School of Theology. And before that he spent ten years working in advertising in London and New York, a fact he is still prepared to admit. His best books so far include Fruitfulness on the Frontline (IVP), The Best Idea in the World (Zondervan) and Thank God it's Monday (Scripture Union).

Readership

- Anyone wishing to prepare spiritually for Christmas
- Christians young and old, of any background
- Those outside the church wondering on the true meaning of Christmas and how to celebrate the season
- Those who know Mark Greene's work
